

Corporate Responsibility

GLOBAL PRINCIPLES

Principles for Global Corporate Responsibility is a document produced by the Interfaith Center on Corporate Responsibility (ICCR), a North American association of 300 Protestant, Roman Catholic and Jewish institutional investors. It presents a set of global standards for corporate responsibility to encourage dialogue and changes in company policies and practices. The document is available to groups working on corporate responsibility and to companies seeking to respond to the challenges of doing business in a global economy.

Principles for Global Corporate Responsibility calls for:

- A new relationship between corporations and communities;
- Payment of sustainable living wages and support of sustainable community development;
- Respect for the dignity of every person and for the workers' right to organize and bargain collectively;
- Strong codes of conduct for corporations and suppliers independently monitored by local non-governmental organizations;
- Corporate governance policies that balance the sometimes competing interests of managers, employees, shareholders and communities; and
- Protection of the environment.
